

Fiction Editor's Note

The Journal of Legal Education received 129 submissions for our inaugural fiction contest—from places as far flung as South Africa and Israel. The writers' names and other identifying information were removed from the entries before judging began. Our judges read every entry, and our editorial team tallied the winner and the other nine finalists. The stories appear here as originally submitted; we only made minimal grammatical or punctuation changes.

Alexandra D'Italia